A young truck driver was killed instantly near Danville yesterday when a car in which he was riding smashed into his own parked truck.

The victim was Lloyd L. Holt, 24, of near Danville. Two other men in the car were hospitalized with injuries.

Sheriff Herman McCormick said Holt had parked his vehicle for an undetermined reason beside Stat Highway 60 about eight miles west of Danville. He was given a ride in town with J. T. Barnett, 22, and Buddy Stevenson, 27, both of Danville.

Advices Housewives to Start Own Business

By HAL BOYLE

NORWALK, Conn. (U) — Mrs. Margaret Rudkin, a self-baked millionaire, has a simple answer to the problems of world's most frustrated woman — the middle-aged American housewife.

"Start your own business," she says.

"Women ought to have more courage about going into business for themselves. A woman is under no particular handicap. In some fields — the food field in particular — she has a distinct advantage."

Mrs. Rudkin, now one of the nation's best known businesswomen, became a success because 20 years ago she needed some dough and kept kneading more and more of it.

Doing the unexpected has been characteristic of her all her life. As a young girl-blue-eyed, freckle-faced, red-haired-Margaret Fogarty dreamed of becoming a famous newspaperwoman.

"I wanted to become another Nelly Bly, and travel around the world writing about its wonders," she recalled.

Instead, after studying journalism and finance at Columbia University, she wound up in Wall Street selling stocks and bonds. Then a stock-broker, Henry Rudkin, sold her on another proposition — marriage.

In 1937 Mrs. Rudkin, by then installed in a big stone mansion on a 300-acre estate near here, had become just another in the legion of suburban housewives, busy caring for her hus-

West Sees No Chance to Block Nasser

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (U) — Western officials reportedly see little chance to block Egyptian President Nasser's drive for full operating control of the Suez Canal.

The future of the Suez — together with alternative means of transport — probably will rank high in the talks between President Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan in Bermuda next week.

Nasser presumably is relying upon Soviet backing to help him make secure the hold which he has been tightening on the Suez Canal since he seized it last July 26. The United States and many other free nations have been trying to keep some measure of operating control of the canal while conceding Egypt's ownership of it.

The "newest Western move" was a proposal that ships using the waterway pay tolls to the World Bank, United Nations or some other "neutral agency. The agency in turn would pay 50 per cent of the collection to Egypt and hold the rest pending a final settlement of the claims arising out of Egypt's nationalization act.

Nasser's regime gave its answer in a statement Saturday. Information Director Abdel Kader Hatem said Egypt would not accept "any such proposal because it violates Egypt's rights according to the 1888 convention on the Suez Canal. He added that from now on all Suez Canal tolls must be paid to Egyptian authorities.

The Western Powers have two principal bargaining points in addition to the less direct pressure of world opinion.

For one, the United States and Britain have frozen very substantial Egyptian assets under their control. Nasser wants them released but experts here doubt they will be a decisive factor.

The other is the fact that not only the nations of Western Europe but also those of South Asia and Africa and many of the Arab states themselves, have an interest in reliable transport through the canal.

If Nasser tries to make his victory complete, he could easily offend or frighten other Arab countries and such nations as India.

Man's Body Is Found, Wife Burns In Store

LITTLE ROCK (U) — Police early yesterday found the battered body of grocery store operator and a trail of blood leading from the fire-razed store nearby where his wife died.

Detectives theorized that a robber had slugged Mrs. George Beyerlein and then attacked her husband as he tried to escape. The officers said that the robber probably returned and set fire to the store with the woman inside.

Esau Mitchell, 50-year-old Negro who lived near the store, was held on an open charge.

Firemen found the body of Beyerlein's wife, Rose, 58, in the store late Saturday night. About 12 hours later, the body of her 65-year-old husband was discovered behind a tent-covered structure at the rear of the house where Mitchell lived.

The white couple operated the store in a predominantly Negro section in south Little Rock.

Residents of the neighborhood who arrived at the scene of the fire shortly after it broke out told officers they heard someone hammering on a wall inside the blazing building.

The Beyerleins lived in quarters at the rear of the store. Mrs. Beyerlein's body was found just inside a door leading from the living quarters to a sidewalk.

Dr. Howard Dishongh, Pulaski coroner, said autopsies revealed no trace of foul play in the death of Mrs. Beyerlein. But the investigation showed that her husband died of multiple brain injuries from blows on the head.

Capt. V. C. Throckmorton, Little Rock fire inspector, said he was certain the fire in the store had been started deliberately.

Although robbery was considered the likeliest motive, police discovered a scorched cigar box in the ruins containing $53.25 in coins and $1 bills. A brown manila envelope found in a partially burned dresser contained $17.45 in government bonds, checks totaling $2,105 and $7.18 in change.

Police said they found "quite a bit" of cash in the pockets of Mitchell after they arrested him.

The Beyerleins had operated the store for at least six years.

Survivors include a son, George, of Little Rock and daughter, Mrs. James J. Robinson of Mulvorn.

Services for the couple will be held here tomorrow and burial will be at Little Rock.

Egypt Moves Swiftly to Show Authority in Strip as New Crisis Develops

Court Upholds Lower Court Decision

LITTLE ROCK (U) — The Arkansas Supreme Court, by a 4-3 decision, today affirmed Arkansas County Circuit Court in refusing damages for injuries suffered by 4-year-old Walter Nolan Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Smith, when he was struck by a truck driven by Herman Whitman near the family's Stuttgart home.

The only issue raised on appeal was whether an instruction of the presiding judge to the trial jury was erroneous. The court majority said it was not; the minority dissented.

The instruction which attorneys for the child protested said that "the fact that the pedestrian was a child did not require the defendant to exercise any due care or proper precaution for the safety of children until he actually observed the child."

The Supreme Court majority said this instruction was "not a complete and accurate statement of the law for the duty of special care would arise not only when the child was actually observed but also when he should have been observed."

But, the majority said, no specific objection was made at the time to this instruction. It added that other instructions made it clear what Whitman's duty under the circumstances was.

The majority opinion was written by Associated Justice George Rose Smith. Chief Justice Carleton Harris and Associate Justices E. D. F. McFadden and Paul Ward dissented.

UN Troops Fire Over Heads of Arab Crowds

By WALTER LOGAN

UP Staff Correspondent

Egypt moved swiftly today to re-establish its authority over the disputed Gaza strip, where Arab demonstrations favoring Egyptian control threatened a new Mid-East crisis.

An official spokesman in Cairo said Egypt has protested to United Nations Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld over United Nations administration of the Gaza area. He added that Cairo has appointed in Egyptian governor for Gaza to take up his post immediately.

Egyptian Information Director Abdel Kader Hatem said the protest claimed that U. N. Emergency Force units were "exceeding their duties" in the strip and had opened fire on civilians.

U. N. forces fired over the heads of a Gaza crowd yesterday and hurled tear gas grenades and used rifle bullets to break up a pro-Egyptian demonstration outside their headquarters.

Cairo radio reported new demonstrations in Gaza today, with crowds cheering Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser and rejecting internationalization of the strip. The broadcast said the crowds demonstrated outside the Gaza administrative headquarters building, but there were no clashes.

In Jerusalem, Walter Eytan, director general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry, in a special broadcast to the people of Gaza, charged that Egypt has launched a large-scale campaign aimed at "discrediting the United Nations Emergency Force and restoring Egyptian rule to the area."

Eytan claimed that refugees from Gaza already had started feeling into Israel.

The Gaza situation reached a peak Sunday when Danish and Norwegian troops of the UNEF fired shots over the heads of 3,000 Arabs besieging U. N. headquarters and drove the crowd back with rifle butts and tear gas. Several shots were reported fired at UNEF patrols on the streets of Gaza.

He said that if we would consent to furnish him with money, he would make himself richest of all the captains on the Barbary Coast.

CHAPTER I

On the night of Aug. 12, Colonel Allan Lark and his guests sat at dinner in the long, low dining room of the House of Lark in Ayrshire. The ruins of the old castle, abandoned at the end of the seventh century, an still seen perched on a high spur above the Water of Tigris; the present house, which replaced it, lies half a mile farther downstream, snug in the woods of oak and beech which cushion it against the bare hills above the little valley.

Allan sipped his laret and looked round at his guests. There was his wife, Mollie's brother, George Buchanan in the Regiment; there were Aymer and James Kennedy, of Edinburgh, their next-door neighbors from a little way up the Sunhar, and a guest of the Kennedys, James Stewart, some son of university professor. The seventh chair was occupied by Allan's elder son Patrick, in his first year at Eton; Hew the youngest was in bed upstairs.

"Where are you thinking of going?" asked Stewart.

Allan had been a little apprehensive when he heard that the guest whom Aymer was bringing to shoot was a don; but Stewart had proved to be an excellent shot and a likable guest, and Allan had come to the conclusion that he was not only a human, but positively a good fellow.

"Abroad, somewhere; we haven't decided yet. I was thinking of Syria, or Morocco, perhaps."

"Tell me, Aymer said you were a professor. Just what do you profess?"

"I'm scarcely a professor," said Stewart, "I'm much more humble just a mere lecturer."

"What in Arabic?"

"Oh, good," said Mollie, innocently; "then you can have a nice talk with Allan; he speaks Arabic like a native."

It was a good many years since Allan's weather-beaten face had achieved a blush, but he came near to blushing now. For years he had allowed it to be inferred in the bosom of his family that he spoke Arabic like a sort of Sandy Arundel, able at will to pass himself off as a Haj in any Oriental city or environment.

"Only kitchen Arabic, you know," he said, with unusual modesty. "I was in the Trans-Jordan Frontier Force for a couple of years."

"Then you can probably make yourself understood better than I can," said Stewart. "In one of those useless soirees who spend their lives immersed in classical Arabic."

"What do you know about the Kaid?" asked Allan, intrigued.

"I've always been interested in empires and exiles, an particularly in renegades, if I may use the expression about a forebear of yours."

"I don't see why not," said Allan; "he was one. He was a younger brother of that chap in the picture there, and he indicated the picture of a man in a high periwinkle, dressed in conventional armor, who looked over his shoulder obliquely at the dinner table. He got into trouble politically at the end of the seventeenth century. He got involved with James the Second or Seventh so whatever you like to call him, and fought on his side at the Battle of the Boyne. After that he disappeared for a few years, and then showed up again as a Barbary pirate—a corsair. He was still going strong in the seventeenth century, because he came here once."

"He must have been getting on in years," said Aymer Kennedy, "he was 20 at the Battle of the Boyne. Born 1688, that's 31 at the time of the picture, and he came here in 1713. That makes him 25 at the time he was here."

"A fine old age for those days," said Allan.

Patrick had appeared with a sheet of paper, which he put into his father's hands. Allan spread it out on the table, and began to read it:

The Tuesday of last week being the 27th of October, 1737 at one o'clock at night came here my Uncle my Father's youngest Brother of whom no intelligence had been heard for many years past.

He arrived one hour after midnight very secretly having ridden up from Port Patrick by way of Glen App with horses which he had hired and which were much weary, and roused me by knocking at my chamber window. He would have me believe that he had been for many years in the Service of the Bey of Tunis, and been by him appointed Governor of an Island off the said Bey's coasts. But (said he) the Bey had bubbled him, and was encroaching upon his jurisdiction. He alleged that if he would consent to furnish him with money he would make himself the richest of all the Captains upon the Barbary Coast, and would restore me 10 times over whatever I might venture in his wicked Enterprises.

He was a coarse Rascal and when I enquired as to his Christian Principles he laughed and confessed that he had been many years a Turk.

For three days I kept him hid here in Larg while he ran thro' the best of what was in my Cellar and while I was in a dread lest he should be found here or his presence known. At last finding that there was nothing to be got from me, he went his way swearing with horrid imprecations, that there would always be Enmity betwixt our Family and that Branch of it which he had begotten God knows on what heathen or Turkish Concubines in these Barbarous Parts where he had cast his Lot.

To conclude with this unhappy Affair, I fear that two young men from the parochin of Ballantrae, one McKissack and one Young, are gone off with my Uncle, and there is also a Report that a girl Elizabeth McKeehan who was bound along the Shore to meet her lover on the Links of Balg has disappeared.

"That's all," said Allan. "But tell me, Stewart: what do you know about our Kaid?"

"Not a lot, but he's quite a legend in Tunisia, and I heard something of him and others when I was working in Tunis. I was there for three winters ago. There were quite a number of such people, you know. You've probably heard of Kaid Maclean in Morocco; he only died 40 years or so ago, a Maclean of Drum by origin. Then there was Private Keith of the Seaforth Highlanders; Thomas Keith was taken prisoner in Egypt, took service with the enemy, and became a big shot under Mahomet Ali; he called himself Ibrahim Agha, and was a really good fighting general, and Governor of Medina in the year of Waterloo. Then William Lithgow the great Scotch traveler in the early part of the seventeenth century mentions a Captain Walcott—probably Ward—another renegade, who was kind to Lithgow in Tunis in about the sixteenth century."

"Good idea," Allan cried. "That's where we'll go in October! Hunt the Kaid! My dear chap, you must remember the name of the place."

They had left Marseilles two mornings before in sheets of rain, and now at 8 o'clock on a morning of early October, it was already hot. Allan was wearing, with some difficulty, a cotton suit which had been made for him in London 10 years earlier, and which he had been looking forward to wearing again ever since he had been ordered abroad in the winter. When the moment came, however, he was unusually bashful, and Mollie had had to push him out of their cabin into the passage, much as a shy boy has to be pushed into a fancy-dress children's party. But by now he was so excited at finding himself abroad once more—

"Properly abroad, none of your France," as he put it—that he was himself again.

At the hotel they had found a note from the Consul-General, asking Allan to come to see him at his convenience; and they discovered also that M. Le Bouteiller had been to call: so at 4 o'clock when the shops began to open, Allan sallied out to begin what he called the Kaid hunt. The Consul-General was a little brown man of enormous charm, who knew many of Allan's old haunts and indeed friends.

Allan told him his story at some length.

"An all that remains now, after I have seen this fellow Le Bouteiller, and got the best briefing I can is to get to Seknouh and poke around I don't suppose I'll find anything, but it looks a nice place, and it sounds a nice place, and there's always a chance of a stroke of luck."

"That's an exciting quest, as I've heard for a long time, said the Consul-General, "and I envy you having such disreputable forebears. Mine only go back three generations, and they're quite impeccable. I'm sorry to say, but I must warn you: there's quite a considerable snag to your plans."

"What said Allan, polling up short."

"There's trouble in Seknouh."

mother was content to sit in a rocker, Mrs. Rudkin, who has four grandchildren, still guides company policy, knows where practically every local goes. She also finds time to collect art, decorated a new estate the family has bought in Ireland, and helps employees with their personal problems.

She feels any middle-aged woman with initiative can make a success in business today.

"It is perhaps a mistake for a father with very young children to try to combine a career and marriage—unless she is an exceptional person and has a cooperative husband," she said, "but often, I think, it is a mistake for a middle-aged woman not to go into business for herself."

"She will find the qualities needed by a good housewife are the same as those demanded by a business in the food field. And any woman who has brought up a family of kids should know how to get along with people, and handle personnel."

"Is business life too difficult for a housewife. No, I don't think so. It takes a bit of doing, but as the old Irish saying goes, 'God broadens the back to bear the burden.' Certainly in the last 20 years he's broadened mine."

Indonesia Crisis Is Developing

By JAMES WLDE

JAKARTA, Indonesia — The Indonesian political crisis was worsening today as mineral-rich south Sumatra joined the spreading rebellion against the central government.

The latest revolt caused open concern among Jakarta officials already trying to cope with rebellious groups who have seized power in central Sumatra, much of that island's northern sector and the islands of East Indonesia. There were warnings of new defections as the sprawling nation of 80 millions waited tensely to see whether President Sukarno would carry out his controversial plan to bring Communists into the government. The rebel leaders still generally promised allegiance to Sukarno although they demanded an end to the government of Premier Ali Sastroamidjojo.

Rumblings of discontent came from Borneo, world's third largest island and least explored territory in the 3,000-mile archipelago. Local sources said the only thing that has delayed an outright coup in Borneo has been a political squabble among island officials. As the Jakarta government's authority shrank to a small remaining part of north Sumatra, Isteri Borneo and Java itself, word spread that the Cabinet would hold an emergency session Wednesday.

JAKARTA, Indonesia — The government of Indonesia, beset by a rash of bloodless rebellions and a financial crisis, has decided to resign on Wednesday, high government sources said today.

The informants said the decision was made after a meeting of the five parties which make up Premier Ali Sastroamidjojo's coalition government.

South Sumatra joined the spreading revolt Saturday. Lt. Col. Barlian, another of Indonesia's restless young army leaders, blasted the Sastroamidjojo government as being "slow and incompetent. The Sastroamidjojo-appointed governor fled to Java, it was reported.

Dissatisfied political and military leaders in Borneo, the world's third largest island and the least explored of the 3,000 in Indonesia, were reported considering revolt.

Rebellious groups already have bolted from the central government in Central Sumatra and in eastern Indonesia. A loyal army commander, who displaced a rebel leader in North Sumatra in December, could be overthrown at most any time, responsible authorities said.

A common complaint of all the rebelling groups is that their areas do not get a big enough cut from the proceeds of their exports for local improvements and services.

Government sources said that if the government resigns, Sukarno might ask Sastroamidjojo to form a new Cabinet, but that the Premier would have to give up his defense post.

Lake Arthur, La., and Miss Fahy Rowland of Selma, Calif., Mrs. Robert L. Pye and Mrs. H. C. McKinney of El Dorado, Ark., Mrs. Guy B. Hayes of Port Lavaca, Tex., Mrs. E. B. Ward, Jr., of Little Rock, and Mrs. J. W. Durden of Port Smith, Ark.

Funeral services will be held at El Dorado at 2 p.m., tomorrow.

Higher Temperatures Along East Coast

By The Associated Press

Much higher temperatures and fair to partly cloudy skies was the outlook for the entire East Coast today while an active low pressure area caused thundershowers and strong winds in the central portion of the country and brought warmer weather from the Great Lakes to the middle Gulf Coast.

Considerable cloudiness and thundershowers were forecast for the Mississippi Valley and show-ers and thundershowers were in the works from the Great Lakes southward to the Gulf.
